BBP LIBRARY UPDATE

Dear Community Resident:

I'm pleased to report that the Bayport-Blue Point Public Library has been moving forward on schedule to renovate the former St. Ursula Center in Blue Point as our new home. As anticipated, redevelopment of our new facility is due for completion in the fall of 2021.

I'd also like to highlight one of the Library's exciting, new features: an innovative "Nature Explorium" outdoor nature center. Its funding comes from a $350,000 State grant secured by New York State Senator Monica Martinez.

A "Nature Explorium" represents a relatively new approach to nature education that had originated about a decade ago. These interactive, outdoor learning centers provide an attractive space for children and their families to connect with nature – and to participate in active programs that will help them appreciate the environment.

While plans for our Nature Explorium have not yet been completed, similar sites have offered both self-directed and group educational programs for preschool through upper elementary school-aged children and their parents or caregivers.

The Nature Explorium concept was developed by the Nebraska-based Dimensions Educational Research Foundation and the Long Island Nature Collaborative for Kids, a project of The Early Years Institute in Port Washington.

"These spaces inspire hands-on activity, creativity, play, and time to explore the natural world for children of all ages," we were told by Heather Fox, Director of Communications and Outreach for the Nature Explore Program, a division of the Dimensions Foundation. "They offer interactive elements that allow young people to use their creativity, imaginations, and initiative."

There are about 450 Nature Explore-certified programs in libraries, schools, parks, and other venues nationwide. Of the eighteen in our state, ten are on Long Island.

With the new library's 8+ acre setting, this Nature Explorium and improved landscaping of the property will enable patrons to enjoy the grounds as well as the 21st Century indoor facility. We have an opportunity here unlike any other library on Long Island and we are thankful to the many people helping us to provide these special benefits to our community.

We're grateful to State Senator Monica Martinez for securing State funding in support of both the landscaping and an exciting Nature Explorium at our new facility. The Nature Explorium is sure to play a valuable role in helping our community's children develop their appreciation of nature.

Very truly yours,

Ronald F. Devine, Jr.
President of the Board of Trustees

By contributing as a library Friend, you can make a lasting difference for our library.
